IMPORTANT NEW NOVELS

The Trufflers

By SAMUEL MERWIN, Author of The Honey Bee

SAMUEL MERWIN

Samuel Merwin is to Greenwich Village, the home of THE TRUFFLERS, what Arnold Bennett is to the Five Towns—its loving but unprejudiced biographer. THE TRUFFLERS—the meaning of the word is disclosed in the early chapters—is a rare combination, for while it is a thoughtful novel of definite intention, it is at the same time an absorbing story full of dramatic action, with young love winding its devious way to ultimate happiness. Whatever your taste in fiction may be, THE TRUFFLERS is pretty certain to satisfy it.

The Agony Column

By EARL DERR BIGGERS

Author of Seven Keys to Baldpate

Notices in the personal column of "London Daily Mail," that romantic institution, popularly called THE AGONY COLUMN, afford interest and amusement for the lovely girl and the hero in opening this story. Then follow surprises at every turn, as surprising and delightful as in MARGERY DAW.

A Strong Man's House

By FRANCIS NEILSON

Author of The Butterfly on the Wheel

FRANCIS NEILSON

A novel of the Great War, not of the battle front, but of the men and women at home. Mr. Neilson is a successful dramatist and a bold and radical thinker. He has been a leader of the Land Tax Group in the English Parliament.

THE LEATHERWOOD GOD

By William Dean Howells

The Boston Transcript Says Editorially:

"'The Leatherwood God' is a veritable history, for it tells the truth and more than the truth. It satisfies the reader's demand for facts and it fulfills his cravings for fantasy. It convinces us that the novelist is the true historian and the real biographer, and that such a novelist as Mr. Howells, whether or not he wear the aggressive label of realist, will be considered a leading authority upon the American life of which he writes. He has written many novels during his long literary career, he has described and recorded many aspects of humanity in many parts of the world, but when he returns to his native Ohio he writes a story that is the very essence of his theory of life and a very perfect example of his theory of the novel. 'The Leatherwood God' is history made alive in fiction."

OUR NATION IN THE BUILDING

By Helen Nicolay

Of the period of national shaking together and development, 1783-1861, the author writes almost as if she were an eye-witness. Leaving cheerfully behind the old, dry, statistical method of writing history; Miss Nicolay, daughter of Lincoln's famous secretary and biographer, tells about what happened, who did it, and what the rest thought of it—as informally as if she were gossiping over the teacups.

THE SHORT CUT

A ROMANCE OF THE GREAT WEST

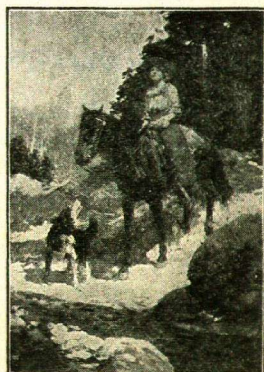

By

JACKSON GREGORY

Author of "THE OUTLAW"

Two Editions before Publication

The two Shanon boys, Arthur and Wayne, own a ranch which includes a mountain lake and a small river. Arthur is killed, and as he had quarrelled violently with his brother the night before, suspicion is directed toward Wayne. Financial complications, real old-fashioned villains, a great horse race in which Wayne comes out victor, and last but not least, the beautiful Wanda, the daughter of the capitalist of the section, all go to make up as thrilling and entertaining a romance as can be imagined. Purely American in theme, optimistic in point of view, with the characters boldly drawn for either good or evil, and with the women the clean, honest, straightforward creatures that we know them to be, "The Short Cut" is a great book of vivid pictures and on a great subject.

"Surely the rider was just what the owner of the voice, half laughing, half crooning, tenderly lilting, must be."

WILLIAM McFEE

Your Attention! "Casuals of the Sea"

By William McFee

An American Edition Now Ready

¶ We are glad to announce that the many aggravating delays which have made it impossible for us to supply the trade with CASUALS OF THE SEA, by William McFee, have now permanently been removed by the printing of an American edition.

¶ When we first made arrangements for the publication of this remarkable work in the United States, we imported copies to the number of 4,000. Owing to interminable delays in shipment, in the customs house, and to the general embarrassment of the English publishing business by the War, we found ourselves utterly unable to supply a demand which grew hourly from the appearance of the first striking review by James Huneker. It was a cause of genuine disappointment to find it impossible to meet the many urgent appeals of the trade. There was the satisfaction of knowing however that McFee had come to stay and that the book was being set up and printed as fast as American compositors and presses could operate.

¶ We are now ready to fill all orders without delay.

¶ We have prepared a small biographical folder which we would be glad to imprint for any bookseller; also some rather unusual postal cards to be sent out by individual book clerks to their best customers. We will be glad to send you samples of these if you will write for them.

¶ There is hardly any need to remind you that every critic of standing in the United States has pronounced CASUALS OF THE SEA one of the most important books of the year. Net, $1.50.

Faithfully yours,

INSURANCE THAT INSURES—II

THE so-called "co-insurance" provision is often a puzzle to business men. It is frequently spoken of as the 80% clause, because 80% is the usual requirement, and rates are calculated on this basis. But it may also be on a 50%, 90%, or other basis. If the insured insures for full value, he gets insurance at proportionately lower rates, i.e., one-eighth more than the 80% rate, or the same as the 90% rate. Under the "co-insurance" provision if there is a total loss, the insured is paid the full face of his policy, and this provision has no application. But in case of partial loss, the insured becomes his own insurer in a definite proportion. Thus on the 80% plan, if one insures a $10,000 property for $8000 or more, he gets the full amount of his loss up to the $8000 or more insured; but if he insures only for $5000 instead of $8000, he becomes a co-insurer for three-eighths of his loss, so that on a $4000 loss the insurance company would pay him $2500 and he would lose $1500. If $5000 were the loss, he would get but $3125; or if $500, he would get $312.50 from the insurance company, and he would be his own insurer for the balance of his loss. Insurance authorities assert that this is for the purpose of standardizing cost so that an insured shall not be encouraged to under insure, and thus in case of partial loss get full return at a less premium than the man who insures for full value.

But the "co-insurance" clause is a dangerous provision and should be avoided whenever possible. It opens the insured to the danger that if he increases his stock, so that his premium falls below the "co-insurance" figure, he can only get back part of his loss, and it invites insurance companies to haggle over losses, which otherwise they would have to pay straight.

The "valued policy law," which existed in many states, but has been repealed in most states, practically prohibits this "co-insurance" provision, except as a special contract between insurer and insured outside the general form of policy. It requires that a person insuring to a stated amount shall be paid the full amount of any loss up to the face value of the policy. It still exists in New Hampshire, from which state most of the outside companies withdrew in protest against this law, leaving the field to local companies. Most of them, however, have since given up the fight and re-established agencies in New Hampshire, where rates are regulated by law, although they claim that the general adoption of such a law throughout the country would increase losses and cost of insurance and necessitate an increase of rates.

The three-quarter provision, sometimes confused with the "co-insurance" 80% provision, is really an obligatory co-insurance to the extent of one-fourth of the risk. It is not usually a feature of insurance practice, except in isolated risks in the country and especially in the South. It actually limits the amount of insurance which can be obtained, to three-fourths of the total value, and in the case of merchandise stocks, to which it is usually applied, it is often coupled with the "iron safe" provision, which requires the insured to keep a stock account in an iron safe, which account he can be required to verify by affidavit in case of loss. This requires the insured to be his own insurer for a quarter of his loss whether total or partial, and is intended to stimulate protective precautions where there is no fire department or no adequate inspection. But it is a hardship and wrong to honest and careful merchants.

Where insurance is taken in more than one company, either simultaneously or by taking out a new policy when stock is increased, there is grave danger of complications, because of differences in the wording of policies from different states or of "riders." Where concurrent insurance is limited to a stated total, two precautions should be taken. When the insured considers his insurance inadequate or has increased his stock beyond the amount of insurance, he should have a written indorsement on his existing policy permitting the desired extension, which the companies usually grant for adequate reason, as without this he might have serious technical difficulties in collecting for his loss. He must also make sure that the wording of the several policies is identical in describing the property insured, as if one policy insures books and stationery and another insures books, stationery, photographs and music, there would be unnecessary confusion and difficulty in collecting for a loss.

The safest method in insuring a stock of goods is to describe it as consisting mainly of books, stationery and other specified articles. It is customary and often desirable to enumerate store fixtures separately or take out a separate policy for them, as there is often a difference of premium between such fixtures and current stock.

Special care should be taken in case of fire to keep in mind the theft clause, by which the insurance companies are released from liability for goods stolen in the process of removal. This provision seems unfortunate for the reason that it acts as a discouragement in effecting salvage for the benefit of the insurance companies as well as the insured. It is, however, understood to be rather a warning against carelessness than a provision to be drastically applied. It is nevertheless a weak feature of an insurance policy, which invites carelessness and disputes.

Where stocks of goods in two different places, interchangeable from one place to the other, are to be insured in a blanket policy, care must be taken to provide adequate proof of the amount of loss in either place, when one stock is consumed or damaged.

When a fire loss occurs, the company should at once be notified, and they send their adjustor or adjustors to figure the loss. The insured should then have the co-operation of his broker or of an adjustor of his own selection to represent him. In making settlement, the best companies take the larger view, and with a fair company adjustor the insured should promptly put before him all the facts and figures to facilitate fair and prompt settlement. The minor companies, especially those which insure cheaply, or shark adjustors, will haggle and take advantage of technicalities to the last degree, and for this the careless insured must be prepared. With good companies and with clear understanding, insurance pays—but let the investor beware of insurance that does not insure.

A LETTER from Sir Frederick Macmillan, which we reprint elsewhere from the Publishers' Circular, explains that the Trading With the Enemy (Copyright) Act No. 2, was required because under the first Trading with the Enemy Act copyrights were made free to British subjects. This means, of course, that Great Britain, by the first Act, nullified the Convention of Berne—apparently without consideration—so that the situation is not improved by the explanation. It now appears that British subjects have taken advantage of the negative result of the Act to utilize trade marks and copy works of art otherwise protected. Sir Frederick suggests as an alternative that the public trustee should protect copyrights by granting no privileges of use during the war. The whole matter seems to put treaty making in an unfortunate and unsatisfactory light, and it is to be hoped that this endeavor to nullify a treaty by a national law, otherwise than as under the provisions of the treaty itself, may be withdrawn.

THE SMALL TOWN BOOKSTORE

Address by E. W. Mumford, of the Penn Publishing Co., before the Keystone State Library Association.

THE largest part of the population of the United States is not in the cities but in the small towns and rural communities that they serve. The problem of the small town bookstore is, therefore, in very large measure the problem of the retail book-trade of the United States.

At the outset we are met with a difficulty of definition. Many a shop in the United States, commonly referred to as a bookstore, and perhaps carrying that word on its sign, nevertheless does not appear on the mailing list of most book publishing houses. Probably most of the houses that you regard as reputable publishers mail trade announcements to not over twenty-six hundred booksellers and book departments in the United States—about one to each 50,000 of our population. In addition to these, there are many that call themselves booksellers, but who deal only in the cheapest books, often only those in paper covers, and who really are dealers in magazines and newspapers, rather than in books.

Your president tells me that you are particularly interested in the bookstore situated in a town of five thousand people or less. I have told him that this kind of bookstore could be dismissed almost as briefly as the famous chapter on snakes in Ireland. It reminds one of the reply of the Massachusetts Congressman to a request that he should address the Democrats of Vermont. He said that if the committee would gather the Democrats of Vermont and bring them down to his back yard in Springfield, he would be glad to deliver the talk.

In other words, the kind of person whom you would regard as in the truest sense a bookseller, hardly exists to-day in a town of five thousand people or less. Indeed, it is hard to find him even in much larger towns.

The problem is in some respects the same in the smaller towns and cities, say up to twenty-five thousand people, and about 70 per cent. of the population of the United States is in towns and communities of this size.

This real bookseller I think you would probably define as one who has a knowledge of, and an interest in books, as ideas, in addition to a knowledge of books as merchandise. He, therefore, will keep a reasonably varied stock of books, new and old, arranged to encourage browsing, and his shop will be a natural center for those who wish to get and to exchange ideas about books.

If one adds to this the ideal condition that he should be a dealer in books alone, it would be difficult to find fifty booksellers in the United States to whom the definition would apply.

The usual bookstore in America in towns of twenty-five thousand or less, is one in which books are carried practically as a side line. There are notable exceptions, of course, but the small town American bookseller will usually tell you frankly that if he had to depend upon the retail selling of books for a living he would starve to death! He will tell you that his book stock does not turn as many times in the year or yield anything like so great a percentage of profit as the stationery, frames and pictures, office supplies and furniture, and possibly leather goods and pottery, or wallpaper, which constitute his main business, and upon which he relies chiefly for his support.

Nevertheless, in many towns of from fifteen to twenty-five thousand people, one may still find a fairly representative stock, and a service that shows an intelligent appreciation of books as a necessary part of the education of the community. In towns of ten thousand or less, it is rarely one finds a store which carries any such representative stock, or shows any appreciation of books as ideas. The stock of a store in such a town usually consists of fifty-cent reprint novels, twenty-five cent 12mo juvenile books, some picture books, usually of low price, for younger children, a few Bibles and prayer-books, a few cheap dictionaries, and possibly a half shelf of American poets, and an odd volume or two of what might be called classical fiction. If biography, history, belles lettres, poetry, philosophy, science, are represented at all, it is likely to be in a few volumes of the Everyman's Library, or some such low-priced collection. The store is, of course, prepared to take orders for other books, and often does so, but it is seldom sufficiently in the current of modern thought to discuss intelligently with a customer the new book in which he may be interested, in any one of the above mentioned fields. As for trying to make a market for any such books, the dealer in towns of that size has usually long ago given up the struggle.

It seems rather a dismal picture, altho it is drawn in no pessimistic mood. It is impossible to blink the fact that there is hardly any important branch of manufacture in the United States to-day which has so poor a method of distribution as the manufacture of books that may be regarded as of more than mere temporary interest. Cheap fiction, both for older and younger readers, has little difficulty in finding a market. It is indeed often sold on newsstands, in drug stores, in grocery stores, and in cigar shops. But books that appeal to more thoughtful readers are so inadequately displayed for retail sale, that three-quarters of the population of the United States never comes in contact with them, or has them offered by an interested and intelligent dealer. I doubt if such a condition exists in any other trade in the country. It is a simple fact that there are more candy dealers in the state of Pennsylvania than there are bookstores in the entire United States.

Now, what is the reason for this condition? The fact is that as compared with other civilized countries, the United States is not a book reading nation. In proportion to population, Switzerland publishes in a year ten times as many new books as the United States, and viewed in this way the United States compares unfavorably with practically every other country of Europe.

The President of the American Library Association two years ago reminded you that we publish six per cent. of the world's new books in this country, and sixty per cent. of the world's periodical circulation.

There is much other evidence that America, in spite of its schools, its colleges, and its libraries is still, in some aspects, a bookless nation. There are certainly few other civilized people among whom serious books are so little regarded as in America. Perhaps this has always been the case. I saw recently the circular of a small town bookstore, published in 1842. School books were the only books mentioned in it, and a great deal of stress was laid upon blank books, stationery and wallpaper.

In this connection read again what De Tocqueville and Harriet Martineau said about the intellectual habits of Americans eighty years ago. And you will perhaps recall the stinging characterizations by Bernard Shaw, James F. Stephen, Ferrero and other European commentators. The habit of reading for the sake of increasing knowledge, broadening the horizon, and maturing judgment, is rare in America, even among college graduates and others whose education and occupation would seem to give a sympathy for books. Bliss Perry hit the nail on the head in a recent commencement address when he said that the American cares more for knowledge than for knowledge. "The real pioneers of science are modest men, but we, the camp-followers who sit around the camp fires and read the newspapers, are braggarts and sciolists. This is one of the temptations of our facile adaptable American temperament. We cannot help putting most of our goods into the shop window."

It is this tendency that makes the way of the bookseller hard, in the larger city, and it makes the real bookseller practically an unknown quantity in the smaller town. I have recently asked a number of dealers in such small towns as to the volume of book purchases probably made by their communities. I assure you there are many old New England towns that do not spend in their local bookstores fifteen cents a year per capita on books. It has indeed been estimated that the entire United States does not purchase twenty-five cents worth of books per capita in a year. I feel quite sure that there is no town in the United States that spends one dollar a year per capita on books.

America spends a great deal more for chewing gum and for the buttons on its clothes than it does for the enrichment of its mind.

The condition of the small town bookstore, so far as its book stock is concerned, will, I fear, be worse before it is better. Many of these merchants are shrewd and successful business men, but they are not interested in books. They are, therefore, undoubtedly neglecting many opportunities to increase their communities in books, and to increase their book market. One of them said recently, "It is not my function to try to induce people to read or buy better books. I keep a great many which may be classed as poor books, but they are cheap, and they sell readily. I keep a few, often more than I can afford, of the better books. If my customers prefer them, I am glad, but I cannot be responsible for their choice."

Under these conditions, it seems unfortunately to be true that the bookseller in the small town is paying less attention to books and more to stationery and other lines of merchandise. Less and less does he profess to have any knowledge of books, except as merchandise, or to keep in his store anyone who has a trained intelligence in books. I told one such dealer recently I could not understand why he continued to sell books at all, and that he seemed to me like the man who bought ice cream, but was too busy to keep the ice around it until it could be disposed of to his customers.

However, one must remember that the present unfortunate conditions are not altogether of the bookseller's making. He used to have a profit on the sale of text books, which has now been very largely taken out of his hands thru the fact that the public schools are purchasing their own books and distributing them free to the pupils. He has also lost a good deal of his trade thru the readier access of the people of his community to larger centers. The mail-order house and the subscription agent have cut into his business. If he handles more magazines than books it is because his public cares a lot more for reading matter than it does for reading. The automobile, the moving picture and the phonograph have made mere amusement seekers of large numbers of our population that perhaps used to be more serious. And altho I realize that I am on delicate ground, I want to say that the bookseller has suffered by what appears to be a growing tendency on the part of library trustees and their friends to use the library and its discount for the purchase of private books.

Indeed, if it had not been for the net price system, which the libraries, no doubt for excellent reasons of their own, have opposed, we should have had a steady decrease in the number of booksellers in the United States during the past five years, as we had in the years just preceding that period.

Nevertheless, those of us who are studying the situation are far from hopeless about it. There are some tendencies in the retail book business, especially during the last two years, that we are watching with great interest. There is, we believe, a decided increase in the number of dealers who are taking an intelligent interest in children's books, with the belief that it is good business to promote among young people the habit of book-loving and book-buying. We also note a very promising tendency of educated women toward the retail book business, especially in children's books. There are new dealers of this kind in New York City, in Boston (one of these being a new book department), in Northampton, Massachusetts, in Utica, New York, and others in western communities. If the business of these women is successful, no doubt a number of other college women and those who would naturally be led into teaching or library work, will try retail bookselling, attracted by the opportunity for an independent business and reasonable income, and the chance to perform a real educational service to their communities.

Librarians know that their communities need the bookstore as well as the library. As Miss Sarah B. Askew, of the New Jersey Library Commission, says, "The personal ownership of two books is worth more than borrowing ten from the library." So important is this private ownership regarded by some libraries, that it has been urged that in communities where the bookstores are weak or non-existent, the library should sell books. Indeed, there are libraries to-day that regularly take orders and transmit them to dealers.

The bookstore is, in fact, a necessary part of the educational work that the library is doing. No matter what your relations to them, the bookstores near you are having an influence upon your community. Speaking to the children's librarians at Asbury Park, Mr. Legler emphasized the fact that the children's department of the public libraries of this country reach about one million out of the twenty million of children who might be enrolled. Yet most of the other nineteen million are reading books purchased in their local bookstores, and the influence of these books tends strongly to undermine the work of your own children's departments.

Recognizing this, many libraries have arranged practical plans of co-operation with their local booksellers, and thru Christmas exhibits and recommended lists, circulated in the fall book buying season, are having some effect upon the character of the purchases of books in their towns. We need a great deal more of this sort of co-operation, for the sake of both the bookstore and the library. The public libraries of America have about seven million borrowers' cards in force. How much greater would be the need for, and the influence of the library, if a large part of these seven million borrowers could finally be converted into book buyers and book owners! The fact is, however, to-day, that there are in the United States, according to a recent estimate by the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, probably not more than five hundred thousand persons who might be called regular book buyers.

If you feel interested in saving the bookstore in your community, you will find for yourself the best way of accomplishing something for it. Any practical co-operation, however, will be based upon a cordial friendship with the bookseller, and a sympathetic appreciation of his problem, remembering always that even with high ideals, he must compromise in order to hold his public at all. With your help, the bookstores in this state could, within five years, change the book-buying habits of the state so as to sell an appreciably larger number of good books. You can help the bookseller to make his community see that there is something better in life than eating, drinking, and the gratification of the senses. Perhaps in time a group of Americans may find something better to talk about than moving-picture heroines and outdoor sports.

Two plans which have been tried, altho not often as yet, are worth considering. In many cases it ought to be possible for the library to find someone in the bookstore who would like to come to the library, especially during the duller seasons in the store, and learn something of the library's point of view on books, beginning, perhaps, particularly with books for children. It would also be interesting to have more libraries and stores try the plan of having a librarian in the store during the Christmas buying season, for perhaps three or four weeks, advertising that she is there to give advice about books, and particularly perhaps children's books. This plan has already been tried with some success in some of the larger cities.

Altho I appreciate that I am again on delicate ground, I would also like to urge that the local bookseller be not lightly passed over in making library purchases. In the long-run, it may pay to sacrifice a little of the annual appropriation for new books, and help to maintain a bookstore thru which you can influence people in your community whom you are not at present touching. To add each year a few thousand book-lovers and book-buyers to the population of a state is no unimportant educational work.

In his recent book, "Ancient Rome and Modern America," Guglielmo Ferrero says that in time history will record that the discovery of America was little less than a calamity. The civilization of America, he asserts, is quantitative, while that of the older civilizations is qualitative. We may not altogether like or agree with this startling indictment, but those of us who work in books cannot but feel that there is a woeful lack of interest in the kind of reading that might, in the course of a generation, exalt American ideals and broaden the horizon of American men and women. In this change, the bookstore must be an important factor, and you will, I hope, feel that it deserves your heartiest co-operation and support.

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM FOR BOOKS OF THE YEAR EXHIBITION IN NEW YORK

THE book publishers of the country have been invited to co-operate in the Eleventh Annual Exhibition of the Books of the Year, Original Illustrations, Manuscripts, and Fine Bindings, in the galleries of the National Arts Club, 119 E. 19th Street, New York City, November 9 to 30. This year's exhibition will be the eleventh such annual exhibition. An interesting feature of this year's exhibition will be a display by the American Institute of Graphic Arts illustrating the development of the book from the earliest times to the present.

The four Wednesday evenings during the exhibition will be open to the publishers and their guests, as well as to members of the club. An interesting program has been arranged for these four Wednesday evenings, as follows:

November 8th, 9 p. m.: Opening of the Annual Exhibition of the Books of the Year. Reception to "The Writers and Makers of Books," under the auspices of the joint committee of the Literary Arts, representing:

The Authors' Club, William P. Trent, president.

The Authors' League of America, Winston Churchill, president.

The McDowell Club, Ernest Peixotto, president.

The National Arts Club, John G. Agar, president.

The Pen and Brush Club, Ida Tarbell, president.

The Poetry Society of America, Edward J. Wheeler, president.

Society of American Dramatists and Composers, Augustus Thomas, president.

The presidents will act as the reception committee.

Among the guests of honor will be: Brander Matthews, John Burroughs, Josephine Preston Peabody Marks, Irving Bacheller, George W. Cable, Dr. John C. Van Dyke, Robert Underwood Johnson, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Will N. Harben. Subject of the evening: "In Praise of the Book." Address of welcome by Mr. Agar, followed by responses from the guests of honor and an original poem on "The True Bibliophile" by Robert Underwood Johnson.

November 15th, 8.30 p. m.: Special reception to novelists and their illustrators. Richard Burton, Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, William Lyon Phelps, Burges Johnson and others will speak on various phases of "The Writing and Illustrating of Books." Hamlin Garland, honorary vice-president of the Authors' League of America, will preside.

November 22d, 8.30 p. m.: Reception to poets and their interpreters. Personal reminiscences of James Whitcomb Riley by Hamlin Garland and others. Special exhibits of Riley's manuscripts and drawings. Edward J.

Wheeler, president of the Poetry Society of America, will preside.

November 29th, 8.30 p. m.: "The Marvels of Modern Printing"; moving-picture film by Frank N. Doubleday, "The Making of a book." Ernest Peixotto, president of the MacDowell Club, will preside.

The attention of all publishers intending to participate is called to the fact that all exhibits should be delivered in the galleries on Monday, November 6. It is understood that each publishing house will send a representative to arrange the individual exhibit in harmony with the general scheme as outlined by the committee. It is particularly requested that the hanging of walls be personally supervised by the art director of each house.

The press view will be at three p. m. on Wednesday, November 8, followed by a reception in the evening. The exhibition will be open to the public on Thursday, November 9, and every week day thereafter to November 30, inclusive, from ten a. m. to six p. m.; and on Sundays from two to six p. m.

Publishers wishing a reservation of space should send a representative to the National Arts Club, 15 Gramercy Park, at once, to confer with the secretary of the committee.

The committee in charge of the exhibition consists of: John Clyde Oswald (chairman), John G. Agar, Arthur S. Allen, Irving Bachelor, Hamlin Garland, William B. Howland, B. W. Huebsch, Ida M. Tarbell, William H. Ukers, Edward Jewitt Wheeler.

COPYRIGHT NOTES

SIR FREDERICK MACMILLAN ON THE TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT, NO. TWO

Sir Frederick Macmillan, head of the house of Macmillan, has sent the following letter to R. B. Marston, editor of the Publishers' Circular, regarding the much discussed Trading with the Enemy (Copyright) Act. No. Two:

"DEAR MR. MARSTON,—While I sympathize fully with you in objecting to anything likely to destroy or injure the Berne Convention, it seems to me that you may be doing our Government some injustice in denouncing it for promoting and passing the Enemy (Copyright) Act, No. 2.

"I understand that the Law Officers of the Crown gave it as their deliberate opinion that, notwithstanding the Berne Convention, the effect of the original Trading with the Enemy Act had been that all copyright protection in Great Britain was denied to works by enemy authors published during the war. It was, therefore, open to anybody either to reprint German books or to publish translations of them without consulting the authors and without making them any payment.

"As this state of things was obviously undesirable the Act in question was passed for the purpose of creating a copyright in such Enemy books and vesting the copyright so created in the Public Trustee.

"There is no obligation on the part of the Public Trustee to grant licenses for the publication of such works [works by enemy authors published during the war], altho he has the power to do so; and as it seems to me impossible to maintain that the publication of such works in England is a national necessity affecting either the safety of the State or the result of the War, I am of opinion that the government should instruct the Public Trustee not to grant any licenses at all. The copyrights in Enemy books would thus be secured and held intact until after the War, when they could be restored to their owners. This we should do, not for love of the Germans, but for the sake of our own self-respect."

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA CELEBRATES BOOK REVIEWERS' NIGHT

OCTOBER 20 was Book Reviewers' Night with the Booksellers' Association of Philadelphia. William B. Lester, of the North American, and Joseph M. Rodgers, of the Inquirer, were the speakers.

OBITUARY NOTES

WILLIAM TUCKER WASHBURN, lawyer and author, died in New York City on October 22. He was born in Boston in 1841, and was educated at Harvard. He was the author of "Fair Harvard," 1869; "The Unknown City," 1880; "Spring and Summer" (verse), 1890; "The Deuce of Hearts," 1891; "Poems," 1905; "The First Stone," 1914.

THE DEATH OF HENRI-GEORGES HEUGEL at his home in Paris May 11th, 1916, has just come to our attention. For many years director of the well known publishing house of Heugel & Cie, ("Au Menestrel"), founded by his father, Mr. Heugel held an important place in the annals of French publishing. He served as President of the Chambre Syndicale des Editeurs de Musique, as Vice-president of the Syndicat pour la Protection de la Propriété Intellectuelle, and was an active member of the Cercle de la Librairie. In 1886 he was decorated by the Légion d'Honneur. In its early days the house of Heugel & Cie won distinction by its editions of the standard methods of music study, among them, Garcia's Méthode de Chant, the L'Art du Chant, by Duprez, Les Clavecinistes, by Amédée Merceour, and other similar classics. In the field of dramatic music also the publications of the house were justly famous. Under the brilliant administration of Henri Heugel since 1883, the prestige and importance of the house have steadily increased. Heugel & Cie hold exclusive proprietorship in the compositions of such eminent composers as Massenet, Dubois, and Ambroise Thomas.

PERSONAL NOTES

H. W. KEAY, president of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, has lost a son, Lieutenant and Adjutant Wilfrid F. Keay, in the battle of the Somme.

HERBERT L. COGGINS, formerly with the Penn Publishing Co. and Whitaker & Ray Co., of San Francisco, has purchased the stationery and gift shop of H. Morton & Sons, of Oakland.

ALFRED C. WESSMANN, president of J. F. Tapley Co., book binders, has been appointed by Mayor Mitchel of New York a member of the Board of Education from Queens County, to fill out the unexpired term of the Hon. John P. Benson. As the appointment comes after a very careful investigation of the men suggested for the position, it is quite a compliment to Mr. Wessmann.

PERIODICAL NOTES

THE CROWELL PUBLISHING Co. has purchased the Every Week Corporation.

DEXTER W. HEWITT, president of the Black Publishing Company, New York, has purchased Arts and Decorations.

The Real Estate World, a new news magazine published in the interests of real estate brokers, property owners and investors in real estate, is being issued monthly at Warren, Ohio.

BY HOLDING UP the cover of the current number of the Metropolitan Magazine to the light there will be seen printed out under a broad black band curving through a purple background, the following words:

"Beginning Illiodor's Revelation of Rasputin—the Sacred Devil of Russia." The motive back of the suppression of this story appeared this week when officers of the Metropolitan Magazine were summoned to appear before the Supreme Court on November 2 as defendants in an action instituted by Sergius Michallow Trufanoff for an order restraining the magazine from using any articles that may have been written from information furnished by him. Trufanoff alleges that the first of these articles was advertised to appear in the November number of the Metropolitan Magazine, but that its publication was prevented at the request of the Russian Consul General of New York, the Bishop of the Russian Church, and other prominent officials of the Russian Government in this country. Trufanoff is better known as Illiodor, the "Mad Monk," who a few years ago is said to have been one of the most influential figures in Russia thru his hold on the Czar. H. J. Whigham, President of the Metropolitan Magazine, said the reason the first article did not appear in the November issue of the Metropolitan was because the second article contained statements that the magazine would not care to publish without further documents to support them. He denied that any contract existed between the former monk and the magazine.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

A 2-CENT LETTER RATE convention has been concluded between the United States and New Zealand.

BOOKSELLERS SHOULD note that the price of Dr. Freud's "Wit and its Relation to the Unconscious" is $2.50 net, not $1.25 net, as given in our Fall Announcement number.

THE BABYLONIAN TALMUD in English will be republished in an improved edition, November 10, by Williams Bookstores Co. of Boston. This is, of course, a standard work and a steady seller. The set is in ten volumes.

THE PAGE Co. has made arrangements with Ernst Richers, 228 Grant Avenue, San Francisco, to represent them on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Richers has in display a complete line of the Page publications.

ETHEL SIDGWICK's books appeal to people whose interest is arrested by character-study rather than plot. "Hatchways," another story of the English upper class, but not connected with her previous books, is to be published November 11 by Small, Maynard & Company.

A NEW "SANDMAN" BOOK is announced by the Page Company—"The Sandman: His Animal Stories" by Harry W. Frees. It is all about puppies, kittens and similar friendly animals, and the illustrations are from life. The "Sandman" stories have been well received by librarians and other authorities.

MANY A POSTPONED European trip will turn into a journey to the South this winter. John Martin Hammond's "Winter Journeys in the South" (Lippincott) meets the demand for a readable account of various American winter resorts, from White Sulphur to Palm Beach and St. Augustine.

THE NAME OF DR. GRENFELL has a connotation of bravery and devotion in many a family circle, for it is to the whole family that his books appeal. "Tales of the Labrador," a Houghton Mifflin publication is a collection of stirring stories of shipwreck, rescue and adventure in the seas and wilds of the north.

THE SALE of the Edward Partington Pulp & Paper Company's mills in New Brunswick to the Oxford Paper Company, Rumford, and the Bryant Paper Company, Kalamazoo, Mich., has been confirmed. The syndicate which negotiated the sale and which will operate the mills is known as the Nashwaak Pulp & Paper Company. These mills make only book papers.

THERE'S A NEW Leacock book coming! On November 17th "Further Foolishness" will be published by the John Lane Company. Anyone who has laughed over Mr. Leacock's past foolishness will be eager to hear him further. In his new volume he talks of "Germany from Within Out," "In Merry Mexico," and—among other things—"Madeline of the Movies; or, Saving a Sinking Soul from Suffocation."

ANNE TOPHAM, who, as English governess in the Kaiser's household, had a unique opportunity to get acquainted with the personal side of the most talked of man in the world, has followed up her "Memories of the Kaiser's Court" by "Memories of the Fatherland," which Dodd, Mead & Company have just published. In this she gives further side lights on the German Emperor, as well as chapters on German womanhood, German education. The Navy and Table-Talk, British Blunders, etc.

THE PROBLEM OF LABOR and all its allied problems—of the idle rich, and of the distribution of leisure and happiness—are the undercurrents of a new novel by Edmund Mitchell which the Menzies Publishing Co., Inc., of New York, will publish the middle of next month. A love story and complicated plot are equally important elements. The author's previous books have been well received.

THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT has granted a petition for a review of the decision of the Circuit Court in the Victor-Macy suit, and has set December 4 as the date for the arguments. Edmund D. Wise, counsel for R. H. Macy & Co., petitioned for a review of the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and upon his presentation of the case the Supreme Court decided to pass upon the case itself.

THE IMPRINT EDITION of the "Books Boys Like Best" will be running some days yet. If there are any booksellers who want to send in eleventh-hour orders for copies they might send them in; probably they will be received in time—but send at once! It is hard to imagine any more concentrated publicity to stimulate the Christmas sale of juveniles; and hard to imagine any bookseller, no matter how small, who cannot spend $5 or $10 to advantage in this way.

NOT ONLY have all the best of Masefield's sea poems been gathered together in "Salt Water Poems and Ballads" but Charles Pears, the illustrator, has "done himself proud" in his end of the work of making the book inviting. This beautifully illustrated volume has every ear-mark of being a best-seller for the Christmas gift trade. We cannot imagine a man, even the most prosaic of t. b. m.'s, who would not be delighted to get it in his sock on Christmas morning. It is published by Macmillan.

EARL DERR BIGGERS, who showed in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" that he knows how to keep an exciting collection of surprises up his sleeve as he tells his story, is the author of "The Agony Column" which the Bobbs-Merrill Company are publishing. The "Agony Column" is an English institution, which is responsible for many romances. Geoffrey West, of Washington Square, determines to make it responsible for one more after he has noticed that the lovely girl from Texas, staying at the Hotel Carlton in London, reads it daily with unconcealed amusement.

ACCORDING to the Publishers' Circular, England is losing no time about reaping advantage from the Trading with the Enemy Copyright Act: "We have already taken two important German book copyrights," it says, "and pirated many of her picture copyrights. In this latter case German copyright pictures, which also in some cases protect German trade in cotton and other piece goods, &c., have been illegally copied in order to be used to deceive German customers, native traders in Africa, America, Asia, &c., into believing they are getting the goods they previously got."

RIDER'S NEW YORK CITY, which promises to take its place as the standard guide book of the section, and which is to be followed by other volumes on various sections of the country, is published this week by Henry Holt & Company. The compilation has been made under the editorship of Fremont Rider of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY by Frederic Taber Cooper, Mary Alden Hopkins and others. The volume—which has the Baedeker plumpness—is filled with a tremendous amount of information about hotels, restaurants, theatres, points of historical interest, museums, churches, and everything else that the traveler, and even the New Yorker himself, wants to know. The man of every taste and every income is catered to.

"THE LEATHERWOOD GOD," the new William Dean Howells novel, published to-day by The Century Co., is a reminiscence of the famous author's own childhood, or rather of the environment of his childhood, for the occurrences described in the book actually took place in that frontier region of Ohio where he himself grew up. The history of the book itself is an interesting one. Mr. Howells had the story from his father, who had known the Leatherwood "god" himself, and he set about writing it in his early youth. Other things, however, intervened, and he laid it aside. Years later he gave the plot to George Parsons Lathrop, Hawthorne's son-in-law. When, in 1898, Lathrop died without having made use of the idea, Mr. Howells set to work in earnest to work it out himself.

THE "O. HENRY BIOGRAPHY" published yesterday by Doubleday, Page & Company has already created a great stir all over the country. The late William Sydney Porter, known by his pen name O. Henry as one of the best short story writers of his generation, served three years and three months in the State Penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, for embezzlement. Ever since O. Henry's death there have been rumors that at some time in his career he suffered for some violation of the law of the land, but nothing definite about it has appeared in print and his friends have endeavored to kill the rumors. But, believing the facts of the case reflect nothing to the great author's discredit, Professor C. Alphonso Smith of the University of Virginia decided to publish the complete story of O. Henry's trial and imprisonment.

Weekly Record of New Publications

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent by publisher for record. Books received, unless of minor importance, are given descriptive annotation. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

A colon after initial designates the most usual name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Ti. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10 cm.); Sq., obl. nar., designate square, oblong, narrow. For books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, etc.

- Aldrich, Mildred. Told in a French garden, August, 1914. Bost., Small, Maynard. c. 266 p. por. D $1.25 n.
Author of "A hilltop on the Marne" here describes a group of people at a house-party in a quaint country place not many miles outside of Paris. War broke and discussion became too heated to be borne in friendly fashion! So war became the one topic that was tabooed: thus each one told a tale, after dinner, that kept the war at its distance.

Carpenter, Helen K., and Carpenter, E: Childs. The Cinderella man; a romance of youth. N. Y., Fly. c. 314 p. il. pls. D $1.35 n.

The poet lodged in a garret, which was so cold that even the flame inside of him did not always keep him warm. Across the roofs, in a house on the right side of the square, lived Marjorie Caner. And knowing them both was Romney Evans, who took some of Quintard's verses to Marjorie, and got her interested in the writer, who was poor and as needful of a fairy godmother as Cinderella. So in this rôle, Marjorie cared for Quintard and encouraged him to write the prize libretto, and above all, not to be too proud to be "happy ever after" even with a rich girl.

Roof, Katharine Metcalf. The stranger at the hearth. Bost., Small, Maynard. c. 457 p. D $1.35 n.

After eight years Nina and her Italian husband, Count Varesca, make a visit to New York. She finds the city much changed, crude, without restraint, given over to nouveaux riches. Her friends assume that she is unhappy, whereas she has learned to accept her husband's jealousy. A popular novelist, Loring, thinks he will be safe behind his reputation for writing strictly about marriage, if he tries to console Nina. She cares nothing for him, but she and Daniel Griscom love each other and have said good-bye because they dare not even be friends. Varesca misjudges the whole situation, tries to kill Loring, and then commits suicide.

Wallace, Edg. The clue of the twisted candle; with a front. [in col.] by I. D. Sisson. Bost., Small, Maynard. c. 344 p. D $1.25 n.

John Lexman was a writer of clever mystery stories. Kara, a rich Greek educated at Yale and prominent in London society, hated the novelist because he had married the woman Kara wanted. The Greek contrived a plot which made Lexman an innocent murderer. But the Greek was cheated of the revenge he craved by Lexman's pardon. His next move was to get possession of the novelist and his wife and subject them to unspeakable tortures. Kara's murder followed. In a story called "The Clue of the Twisted Candle," Lexman tells who was guilty.

Young, F. E. Mills. The bigamist. N. Y., J. Lane. 329 p. D $1.35 n.

Concerns the outcome of a false marriage between Pamela and Arnott, in which she was the deceived one. They were very happy, and believed they were meant for each other. Arnott's wife wrote Pamela the truth. Then Pamela had to choose, and thinking that happiness was at stake and worth everything else, she decided to go on as they were. Their acknowledged relation wrought a change in Arnott, who went from bad to worse. Now Pamela saw it as her duty to stay by him. She refused to appeal to the law, which was on her side, or to marry Dare, who meanwhile, was ready to wait.

Under the headings of "BOOKS WANTED" and "BOOKS FOR SALE" book-trade subscribers are given under their own names five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertising for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding one hundred lines a year, a maximum of fifty lines under "Books Wanted" and fifty lines under "Books for Sale," and if over five lines are sent for either department in any one issue, or fifty lines for each department within the calendar year, the excess is at ten cents a line. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "HELP WANTED" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

The Magazine of American History, edited by Lamb and Stevens. 1884-1888, 1891. 72 Numbers.

The Magazine of History, edited by William Abbott, Vols. 1-17 (except October, 1908).

Together 169 Numbers, all in the original wrappers. $25.00.

Most of this material is to be found in no other source, and the text, together with the portraits, maps, facsimiles, and other illustrations form such an encyclopædia of little known historical facts as to be indispensable to the Historical student.

There Are Different Ways^o of Getting New Customers

A great majority of our customers come to us through the recommendations of those whose work we have handled to their satisfaction. The following is from the publisher of a recent book:

"The book is well printed and nicely bound, and is a credit to the Vail-Ballou Co."

We believe that no concern possesses an asset that is comparable in value with a long list of satisfied customers.

THIS is the way the list "Books Boys Like Best" will be advertised this Fall in such periodicals as:

THE OUTLOOK

THE INDEPENDENT

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS

ST. NICHOLAS

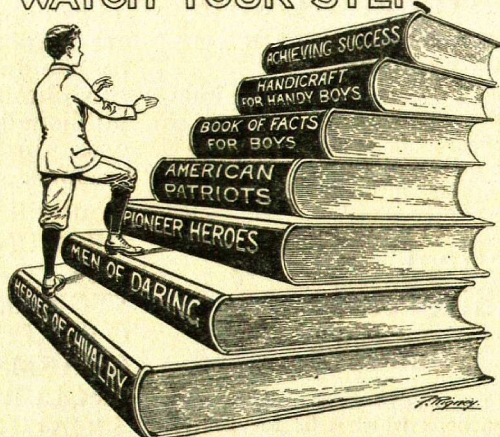

THE BOOKMAN

BOY'S LIFE

GOOD BOOK WEEK

DECEMBER 4TH-9TH 1916.

"WATCH YOUR STEP"

BUY THE BEST BOOKS FOR YOUR CHILDREN.

Every bookseller who cares to co-operate can reap a portion of the value of the publicity given in this way to boys' book reading and book buying. By arrangement with the Boy Scouts of America, who are responsible for the list, copies of "Books Boys Like Best," bearing your own imprint, may be had in quantity lots at duplicating cost as follows:

100 Copies	. . .	$ 3.00
500 "	. . .	12.50
1000 "	. . .	20.00

Orders should be forwarded at once as we cannot fill any orders sent in later than Oct. 25th.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY

The LIPPINCOTT List of Fine Illustrated Editions

Rings

By GEORGE FREDERICK KUNZ
Ph.D., A.M., D.Sc.

Profusely illustrated in color and double tone.
Net, $6.00.

The origin, purposes, and wearing, the forms and materials, the historic interest and talismanic powers of rings as they have played a part in the life and associations of man.

Winter Journeys in the South

By JOHN MARTIN HAMMOND

Profusely illustrated. Net, $3.50.

A fascinating book on the winter resorts of the South all the way from the Sulphur Springs to Palm Beach and St. Augustine, pictured by the author himself with new photographs taken especially for the work.

Parks

Their Design, Equipment and Use

By GEORGE BURNAP

Official Landscape Architect, Public Buildings and Grounds, Washington, D. C.

Profusely illustrated. Net, $6.00.

This, the only exhaustive book on the subject, and by the foremost authority on the subject, is an amazing addition to the literature of civic planning.

These sell not only to those who wish to own or to give the most distinctive publications on the market, but also to those interested in the special subjects of which they treat who require the most complete and accurate information.

They are written by experts and illustrated with the greatest care.

These handsome volumes are similar in size and style to the important works of this character that we have published with great success during the past few seasons.

You will immediately recall DR. KUNZ'S "THE CURIOUS LORE OF PRECIOUS STONES," "THE MAGIC OF JEWELS AND CHARMS," EBERLEIN & McCLURE'S "THE PRACTICAL BOOK OF PERIOD FURNITURE" which is now in its fourth printing, "HAMMOND'S COLONIAL MANSIONS OF MARYLAND & DELAWARE," THOMAS'S "PRACTICAL BOOK OF OUT-DOOR ROSE GROWING," third printing and "LANCASTER'S VIRGINIA HOMES & CHURCHES" which is now out of print and selling at a premium.

Imprint circulars (in three colors) will be supplied dealers who wish to distribute them among their best customers.
